

James Ratcliffe

James trained as a solicitor and archaeologist and has been General Counsel at the Art Loss Register for over 6 years. He leads the ALR's recoveries team and at any one time is representing claimants ranging from private individuals to nation states in numerous cases of stolen and looted art and antiquities. As well as his links to claimants, the role requires close liaison with the art market and law enforcement agencies worldwide.